BEST BETS

Aldiviva Quartet will play Baroque and classical music today at Red Butte Garden, at mouth of Red Butte Canyon.

MUSIC/DANCE

◆ ALDIVIVA, a mandolin-and-guitar quartet composed of Tully Cathey, John Thompson, Todd Woodbury and Patrick Zwick, will perform this evening at Red Butte Garden.

Composers will run the gamut from Vivaldi (his Concerto Grosso in D minor, Op. 3, No. 11) to Dave Brubeck ("Blue Rondo a la Turk"), much of it in arrangements by Zwick. Featured will be music from Prokofiev's "Lt. Kije," Kurt Weill's "Threepenny Opera" and Peter Warlock's "Capriol Suite," along with the Courtly Dances from Britten's "Gloriana."

In addition Cathey's own "Elements IV," recently premiered by the Louisville Orchestra and the Modern Mandolin Quartet, will be performed, together with music of Handel and Mozart.

Starting time is 6:30 p.m., with tickets $6 at the gate. Concertgoers are invited to bring blankets and a picnic dinner.

MUSIC

Aldiviva outdoors

The classical pickers of the Aldiviva Quartet will present a program of Baroque and classical music today at Red Butte Garden, at the mouth of Red Butte Canyon above Fort Douglas.

Aldiviva, the word, is Italian composer Benedetto Marcello's play on Vivaldi's nontraditional use of the mandolin. Aldiviva, the group, is Utah Symphony violinist John Thompson, Utah Symphony bassist Patrick Zwick, guitarist/composer Tully Cathey and classical guitarist Todd Woodbury.

The program will range from Handel's "Water Music" to the contemporary sound of Dave Brubeck's "Take Five."

Tickets are $6 for adults or $3 for children ages 3 to 12. The concert is set to begin at 6:30 p.m.

Rain moves Red Butte concert indoors

Quartet moves music to Kingsbury Hall

MOTHER Nature filled the Salt Lake Valley skies with dark gray, water-logged clouds on Sunday, July 25. This summer storm forced the Aldiviva String Quartet to move their concert from the scenic beauty of Red Butte Gardens and Arboretum to Kingsbury Hall at the U of U. In spite of the inconvenience, the group played an outstanding and energizing concert.

Todd Woodbury, who plays guitar, mandolin and cello, said the group has been together just over a year. Woodbury, who teaches music at the U of U, commented on the group's musical background.

"We all bring something different to the ensemble because we all come from different backgrounds," he said.

Woodbury said the group plays a variety of music from jazz and classical to Brazilian. He particularly enjoys the unique beat and rhythm Brazilian music offers.

Other members of the quartet include John Thompson, Patrick Zwick, and Tully Cathey.

When not playing with Aldiviva, Woodbury combines talents with Paul Binkley. The two have played at Redwood and SCC campuses and hope to return next year.

Two more concerts are scheduled at the Red Butte Gardens this summer. The next will be folk artist Rosalie Sorrels on Sunday, Aug. 8. The season ends when Jerry Jeff Walker brings his unique brand of country music to the Gardens on Sunday, Aug. 22.
